

Self-watering pots are a convenient way to save water in your garden

RENOVATING

Self-watering pots are a convenient way to save water in your garden

HomeLeisure's® WaterSaver™ self-watering pots [distributed by Master Distributors] are made in Australia and available in a variety of contemporary and traditional styles, sizes and colours; with a reservoir in-built at the bottom of the pot. When the plant detects water at the bottom of the pot, the roots pass through a perforated insert into the reservoir.

FEBRUARY 14, 2018

HomeLeisure's® WaterSaver™ self-watering pots [distributed by Master Distributors] are made in Australia and available in a variety of contemporary and traditional styles, sizes and colours; with a reservoir in-built at the bottom of the pot. When the plant detects water at the bottom of the pot, the roots pass through a perforated insert into the reservoir.

Photography Credit by Hallbury Home

About Renovating

RENOVATING

Advertise with us

Terms & Conditions

Privacy Policy

Flick through previous issues of RENOVATING MAGAZINE

